AREAS OF EXPERTISE

Personal Injury, Industrial Disease, Clinical Negligence, Public Authority Liability, Abuse, Employment & Discrimination, Health & Safety, Inquests, Costs & Litigation Funding, Arbitration

JUDICIAL APPOINTMENTS

Recorder: 2008

Catherine is a specialist personal injury barrister. She is recognised as a leading junior in both Chambers & Partners and Legal 500. She is known, in particular, for her expertise in occupational stress and occupiers' liability claims. However, she is experienced in all fields of personal injury and industrial disease (including fatal claims). She also undertakes clinical negligence cases.

Catherine is regularly instructed in public authority liability cases. In addition to personal injury claims, her public authority practice includes human rights law, social work and educational negligence, misuse of private information, property damage, and disability discrimination.

Catherine also has a strong defendant health and safety practice, she is regularly instructed at high profile inquests, and she has an expanding practice in the field of costs.

Catherine has been a Recorder since 2008 and she sits in the criminal (including serious sexual offences) and civil jurisdictions (Wales Circuit).

When not working, Catherine is often to be found walking her retired racing greyhound (or watching her run around the local park).

Costs & Litigation Funding

Catherine has an established, but developing, practice in the field of costs and costs budgeting. She has received training in costs and cases management as a Civil Recorder and she is fully aware of the current issues and proposals in this and related fields.

Catherine regularly undertakes costs and case management hearings. She is able to make submissions on detailed costs budgeting issues, and issues of principle, without the need for the instruction of a specialist costs practitioner.

Catherine has recent experience of issues concerning the application of qualified one-way costs shifting (QOWCS) and of those relating to fundamental dishonesty. However, she also has expertise in costs' issues of more general application, including situations in which offers outside of Part 36 are advisable.

Her recent cases include a successful contested hearing in respect of the appropriate costs order following the settlement of damages, where there was an outstanding disagreement as to the apportionment of costs between two defendants, advising on non-Part 36 Calderbank offers, and advising on non-party and wasted costs orders.

Directories

Chambers & Partners 2017 says that she is widely recognised for her broad expertise and delicate handling of psychiatric injury, stress at work and sexual abuse claims. "She very quickly picks out the key details from vast swathes of information." "She's excellent, a joy to work with."

Legal 500 2016 says "She has a wonderful knack for putting difficult legal concepts into plain language".

Chambers & Partners 2016 said "She provides very authoritative and clear advice and she has the ability to assimilate a large amount of documentation very quickly. She is an expert in stress and harassment cases".

Legal 500 2015 said "Her intellect is immense and solicitors trust her judgement implicitly"

Earlier editions of the directories included the following:

"The "decisive and robust," Catherine Brown is a skilled negotiator who is "able to explain complex issues in straightforward terms" and put clients at ease." She has "sound judgment and focus" and was commended for having skills associated with a far more senior advocate. She is respected for her "detailed and comprehensive" approach and the fact that she was "ever-prepared to make hard decisions. "Catherine "is widely held out as one of the leading personal injury juniors on the circuit" who is well known for her "tenacious cross-examination." Fellow barristers note that she is “tough but sensible – she will hold her line but never if it is a foolish one.”

She has also been described as “clued up” and “regularly briefed on important personal injury cases”. The entry continued by saying that she was “a tenacious trial lawyer and a formidable opponent who is outstanding on large stress claims”. Clients have described Catherine as an “exceptional cross-examiner” and “always extremely supportive of her clients”.
