Tom is a highly regarded barrister specialising in clinical negligence, inquests & inquiries, industrial disease and personal injury litigation. He is consistently praised in the independent legal directories, where he is described as an "exceptional" barrister whose "written documents are excellent" and who is "helpful, thorough and really quite brilliant". Clients particularly praise his intellectual rigour ("very clever and thorough", "analytical, logical and scientific"), advocacy ("a shrewd advocate", "nothing shy of brilliant") and practical approach ("wise beyond his years", "superb commercial acumen").

Tom has a scientific academic background in chemistry, which informs his practice, and he is noted by the directories to have a "remarkable capacity to process and distil complex medical information into clear, understandable terms" and to be "fantastic at thinking outside the box and working to bring experts together in conference".

He represents clients in court and in all forms of Alternative Dispute Resolution.

He has experience of disputes arising from breach of contract, claims involving wrongful interference with goods, construction disputes, misrepresentation and restitution claims. He also has experience of insolvency matters and disputes between companies and directors.
